Creating DF (From Spark Data Sources)

- path = path to file
- comment = specify char or int, and lines starting from those will be skipped from DF
- sep = define how row data is separated
- nullValue = define those values as NULL
- inferSchema = define data types and auto detect blank values as null
- header = define 1st row as header

by default an elem under quotes like "dms" is treated as " " "dms" " "

- escape='' sets it to " "dms" "
- escape=' " ' sets it to "dms"
- escape=" ' " sets it to " " "dms" " "

In [74]:
```python
df_csv1=spark.read.csv("data/withnull1.csv",sep=",",nullValue="NONE",inferSchema=True) df_csv2=spark.read.csv("data/withnull2.csv",comment="N",escape="'",sep=",",nullValue="NONE
df_csv3=spark.read.csv("data/withnull1.csv",sep=",",nullValue="NONE")

Cube

In the below statement we have applied cube, count, and sort function together on the columns which generate grand total cases including Null values.

cube function takes a list of column names and returns possible combinations of grouping columns. We can apply aggregations functions(sum,count,min,max,etc) on the combinations to generate useful information.

In [66]:
```
df13=spark.createDataFrame([("Chocolate",2),("Kurkure",5),("Sheets",20), ("Kurkure",20),("Chocolate",10),("Chocolate",5)], ["Item_Name","Quantity"])
df13.show()
df13.cube("Item_Name",df13["Quantity"]).count().sort("Item_Name","Quantity").show()

rollup

rollup returns the subset of rows returned by the cube. It takes a list of column names as input and finds the possible combinations. We can apply the aggregate function to extract the needed information. The extracted rows are less in number but actually worth using.

In [69]:
df13.rollup("Item_Name",df13["Quantity"]).count().sort("Item_Name","Quantity").show()

Write & Save to Files

1. "errorifexists" or "error" is default, if data exists
2. "append" data is added to new file with or without coalesce
3. "overwrite" overwrites the data
4. "ignore" data is not written even if data is new, old remains intact

---

1. partitionBy divides data into folders by the partition names as partitionBy col, but partitionBy col is not saved to file. used by save and saveAsTable
2. bucketBy with saveAsTable
3. sortBy with saveAsTable, must be used together with bucketBy; but first bucket it then sort it
